

Conjunction Openers

Some conjunctions can be used as openers by forming subordinate clauses. Why not try starting some of your sentences with a conjunction by adding a main clause to some of the examples below?

If

If they had won,
If she didn't notice,
If I behave myself,
If he ever stopped laughing,

Since

Since his dreams were shattered,
Since they were tired,
Since he was so close,

As

As they were leaving,
As she had a plane to catch,
As quietly as they could,
As I write this letter,
As he devoured his meal,

When

When the rain had stopped,
When it finally came to a stop,
When the silence was broken,

Although

Although he had a headache,
Although it felt strange,
Although she broke the rules,

While

While they were away,
While the hurricane crashed,
While she sat daydreaming,
While I listened intently,
While she loved adventures,
While he was tempted,
While you are waiting,

After

After the chaos had passed,
After the storm calmed,
After their travels came to an end,
After the alarm went off,
After all their money had been spent,
After he gave his speech,

Before

Before he could speak,
Before they were rudely disturbed,
Before she caught her breath,
Before I walked on the stage,

Until

Until the holidays were over,
Until their task was finished,
Until you finish your lunch,
Until the egg hatched,
Until she spoke,
Until they formulated a plan,

Because

Because they were hungry,
Because she felt anxious,
Because he missed the bus,
Because she never listened,
Because he worked tirelessly,
